

Welcome to San Diego Zoo Safari Park

The San Diego Zoo Safari Park is a sprawling wildlife sanctuary located in Escondido, California. This park offers visitors the opportunity to explore expansive habitats and encounter a wide variety of animal species in environments that mimic their natural settings. It is a one-of-a-kind destination where you can embark on thrilling safari adventures and contribute to global conservation efforts. Visitors are guaranteed to create unforgettable memories while exploring the wonders of nature.

A Glimpse into History

The San Diego Zoo Safari Park was initially opened in 1972 under the name "San Diego Wild Animal Park." Its primary goal was to provide spacious habitats for animals and to support global conservation initiatives. Over the years, the park has played a pivotal role in wildlife preservation, housing endangered species, and contributing to groundbreaking reintroduction programs. Its storied history highlights humanity's commitment to protecting the natural world for future generations.
